Local merchants ready to reopen

BY COLLIN OVERTON

Local retailers have their sights set on reopening this week due to eased COVID-19 emergency restrictions at the state level.

Gov. Eric Holcomb announced Friday that Indiana would begin Stage 2 of the state's loosening of social distancing regulations, which had shuttered all businesses not considered essential, like hair salons, gyms and certain retail stores. With the implementation of Stage 2, Indiana will lift essential travel restrictions, allow social gatherings of up to 25 people and permit factories that were previously closed to open to full capacity.

More importantly for Main Street, it also allows certain retailers — such as furniture, clothing, jewelry and liquor stores — to allow customers back in at 50% capacity starting May 4. Bars and restaurants will be allowed to open May 11, but won't be allowed to seat customers at the actual bar.

Those older than age 65 or with health conditions are still advised to stay home, according to the state.

In addition to Madison City Hall, which was open Monday morning, some local retailers like Second Chance Furniture on Clifty Drive were already doing business.

Unlike most retailers, Second Chance has done well throughout the shutdown due to customers calling and ordering furniture through roadside pick-up. Owner Leslie Thornton said April sales actually surpassed last April's sales thanks to the generosity of customers who kept the store's phone lines busy.

"We've been very blessed with support," she said.

Thornton said the store could have stayed open throughout the shutdown as they sold some essential items, but she didn't feel it was right at the time. Now

Public Works OKs bidding $1.5M in road projects

BY MARK CAMPBELL

With Monday's partial re-opening of Madison City Hall, the city's Board of Public Works met in chambers after hosting its previous two meetings on Zoom video conferencing.

But with the city just this week phasing in its re-opening, the only people on hand were the board and city officials with the remainder of the audience viewing on the city's Facebook Live page and local access TV Channel 15.

None of that kept the board from completing a short agenda that included extending the time limitation on a PACE grant project on West Main Street and approval of Southwestern Jefferson Country School Corporation students and their parents wave to their teachers during a teachers parade down North Madison Avenue and throughout Hanover on Friday. The parades are becoming increasing popular as a way for teachers and students to reconnect during the COVID-19 emergency that canceled classes for the remainder of the school year with all instruction via eLearning or take-home packets.

Students and their parents turned out throughout Hanover to show their appreciation for the teachers who have been working with them via eLearning and take-home packets since the COVID-19 emergency canceled classes the remainder of the school year. Elena Watson (from left), Adalei Watson, parent Katy Lowe Schneider and Sarah Schneider staked out a spot near the Jefferson County Library Hanover branch to hold up their signs.

Woman who beat odds in COVID-19 battle leaves hospital

BY LAURA LANE
THE HERALD TIMES

BLOOMINGTON — After 20 days on a ventilator battling COVID-19, her lungs infected and her chance of survival slim, 49-year-old Jeri Hall suddenly started to get better.

When Dr. Eric Trueblood took her off the vent on April 16, he asked his patient if she needed anything. Hall was weak, barely able to speak. The doctor leaned in close.

"Yeah," Hall whispered in a raspy voice. "Get me out of here."

Tuesday afternoon, Trueblood stood quietly by as Hall, strapped into a rolling hospital bed, got pushed down a long hallway and out the front door at Monroe Hospital.

About 75 hospital nurses, doctors and staff lined the hallway, applauding as Hall departed. She was headed to a rehabilitation hospital to regain her strength and get back on her feet so she can return to her Owen County farm: fresh air, goats, chickens, a few dogs, a black cat, horses.

Outside, the wind blew open the doors to the medical transport van. Family members and friends had gathered to see her off.

"Love you mama," her son Ty Robinson called out.

Chief nursing officer Nancy Bakewell said other COVID-19 patients have recovered and left the hospital, but this was a particularly special moment, so unexpected.

Because Trueblood, a critical care lung specialist, had told Hall's family she likely would die from the coronavirus.

"I don't know that I've ever seen anyone with acute respiratory distress syndrome this bad who went on and survived it," he said Tuesday afternoon.

At the darkest moment, he leveled with Ronnie Sue Robinson around midnight about the reality of her mom's dire condition. "I don't see how we are going to get her through the night."

Hall was alive at daybreak, and the medical team continued to try — everything — to save her, including several experimental drugs and turning her face-down, once for two days straight.

"We used all the tricks, everything we could think to do," he said. "We paralyzed her at one point. We bought her time. And mostly, we didn't give up."

There always was a glimmer of hope, and also an agreement with Hall's family to not take futile measures to save her.

Every time her condition worsened, every time a new drug didn't work, each time her oxygen levels would plummet — sometimes to 70% with the vent going full bore — Hall "would always hang on, sometimes by just a thread."

Trueblood attributes Hall's rebound and road to recovery not to the medicines he tried but to the supportive care she received, her immune system and her resolve.

"She is a strong person. And our staff was invested in her," he said. "Being such a small hospital, I could focus on her. We rode it out."

Supreme Court holds 1st arguments by phone

BY JESSICA GRESKO AND MARK SHERMAN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — They politely took turns speaking. Not a child, spouse or dog could be heard in the background. The conference call went long, but not by that much.

And with that, the Supreme Court made history Monday, hearing arguments by telephone and allowing the world to listen in live, both for the first time.

The arguments were essentially a high-profile phone discussion with the nine justices and two arguing lawyers. The session went remarkably smoothly, notable for a high court that prizes tradition and only reluctantly changes the way it operates.

The high court had initially postponed arguments in 20 cases scheduled for March and April because of the coronavirus pandemic. Courtroom sessions were seen as unsafe, especially with six justices aged 65 or older and at risk of getting seriously sick from the virus. But the justices ultimately decided to hear 10 cases by phone over six days this month.

The cases the court will hear include President Donald Trump's effort to shield tax and other financial records and whether presidential electors have to cast their Electoral College ballots for the candidate who wins the popular vote in their state.

The court chose a somewhat obscure case about whether the travel website Booking.com can trademark its name for its first foray into remote arguments. The more high-profile arguments come next week.

Monday's groundbreaking session began at the usual time of 10 a.m. EDT, when Marshal Pamela Talkin called the court to order and Chief Justice John Roberts announced the case.

"Oyez! Oyez! Oyez!" Talkin began, using the ceremonial language used in the courtroom. But she skipped a few words of her usual script and didn't tell people "to draw near" and give their attention, a reflection of the unusual circumstances.

Roberts asked the first questions of government attorney Erica Ross, who was arguing that Booking.com should not be allowed to trademark its name because it is a generic term followed by ".com." The justices then asked questions in order of seniority instead of the usual free-for-all, rapid-fire style that questions are asked in the courtroom. That meant Justice Brett Kavanaugh, who joined the court in 2018, went last.

One mild surprise came early in the arguments when Roberts passed the questioning to Justice Clarence Thomas, who once went 10 years between questions and has said he thinks his colleagues pepper lawyers with too many. But in this format, Thomas spoke up, asking questions of both lawyers. It was the first time in more than a year that he had asked a question.

The cases the court will hear include President Donald Trump's effort to shield tax and other financial records and whether presidential electors have to cast their Electoral College ballots for the candidate who wins the popular vote in their state.

Glitches were minor. At one point Justice Stephen Breyer's line was briefly garbled. At another, when the questioning was passed to Justice Sonia Sotomayor, there was a long pause and the chief justice said her name a second time before her voice was heard. "I'm sorry, chief," she said before beginning her questioning.

Several justices said "good morning" to the lawyers, a telephone nicety not often heard in the courtroom. And Roberts occasionally interjected to keep things moving, saying, "Thank you, counsel," when he wanted Ross or Booking.com's lawyer Lisa Blatt to stop talking so he could move to the next justice.

"It is a fundamental principle of trademark law that no party can obtain a trademark for a generic term like 'wine,' 'cotton,' or 'grain,' " Ross told the justices, pointing them to an 1888 Supreme Court case in which the justices ruled that adding a word like "Company" or "Inc." to a generic term doesn't make it eligible to be trademarked.

Some of the exchanges were playful, as happens from time to time in the courtroom. Breyer used pizza.com and cookies.com as examples of websites and discussed with Blatt searching on the internet for toilet paper.

All told, arguments took roughly an hour and 15 minutes, slightly longer than the hour allotted in the courtroom.

One element of the morning that was truly different was the audience. While the courtroom holds only about 500 people and members of the public who want a seat have to line up outside the Supreme Court before dawn, an untold number of people anywhere in the world could listen to Monday's arguments, which were streamed to the public by the media.

The experiment could propel the court to routinely livestream its arguments. Or it could just be an extraordinary exception to the court's sustained opposition to broadening the audience that can hear, if not see, its work live.

suffering from a gunshot wound to the head. She was transported to University of Cincinnati Medical Center where she died from her injuries.

According to the segment on Live PD, police believe the shooting was part of a drug deal gone bad between Donahue and Bailey and his girlfriend, Shelby Geisler, after the three had met earlier on April 8.

Geisler, 22, was arrested and charged with robbery on Friday, April 24, according to court records. She is also apparently from Commiskey and she and Bailey have a child together, according to court documents.

Court records said that during the drug deal Geisler reached into Donahue's car and forcibly tried to take her phone from her and during that struggle Bailey pulled a gun and shot Donahue.

Records state Bailey is from Commiskey and was last seen near County Road 1000 West and County Road 750 North near Commiskey in northern Jefferson County. However, he also has ties to Switzerland County, Indiana and the Milton, Kentucky area.

Police in Jefferson, Switzerland and Jennings County in Indiana and Trimble County in Kentucky have all conducted searches for Bailey including using the Indiana State Police helicopter to help search the rural Commiskey area soon after Bailey was identified as a suspect.

So far Bailey has evaded capture but is considered armed and dangerous. He is listed as 5-foot-11, 180 pounds with blonde hair and blue eyes.

"We're still looking for Travis," Cincinnati Detective Robert Randolph said. "He's wanted. There is an active murder warrant out for his arrest. His last known location was in South/Central Indiana."

Anyone with information about the whereabouts of Travis Bailey, should call the Indiana State Police-Versailles Post at 812-689-5000, the Cincinnati Police Department at 513-352-3542, or the Jefferson County Sheriff's Department at 812-265-2648.

a list of road work to be bid this summer using money from a matching state grant administered by the Indiana Department of Transportation.

The PACE extension will allow Steven McKay, 505 W. Main St., a 12-month extension to complete painting, window repairs and chimney repairs funded through a $4,800 matching city grant program. The road agreement clears the way for the city to bid more than $1.4 million in road resurfacing projects funded through a 50/50 Community Crossings grant.

The road work must now be bid in the next four months and completed hopefully by the end of the summer.

The grant will fund about six miles of milling and paving work on portions of 45 streets — plus some curb, sidewalk and ADA accessibility improvements — in the city. The projects include work both on the hilltop and downtown with the largest two projects funding repaving of Bellaire Drive from Cragmont to Crestwood street at an estimated cost of $63,682 and Hargan Drive from Ross Street to 380 feet east of Hargan Place at an estimated cost of $52,851.

The work will resurface streets that have both decayed from age and deteriorated from cuts into the pavement for water and sewage repairs since they were last resurfaced.

With than in mind, board member David Carlow urged the city's water and sewer departments to take a close look at the streets to be resurfaced and do any scheduled maintenance work in those sections prior to the repaving to help preserve the new surface for as long as possible.

Mindy McGee, the city's administrative assistant, said it seems like every time streets are repaved that it is not long before a new surface must be cut into for utility repairs. She said some of that is related to the milling and repaving work itself in that lines are sometimes weakened by the vibration and paving traffic, weakening pipes that then present themselves as leaks soon after the repaving is done.

The board approved the list of roads to be bid and granted Mayor Bob Courtney authority to sign those contracts once bids are received to expedite the work.

Courtney noted that the work is balanced throughout the city but none of it will involve much-needed work on State Road 56 — Main Street — from the Gateway bridge approach project on the east to the top of Hanover Hill on the west.

He said INDOT is working with the city to make some improvements to that route — and replace a large culvert just west of downtown Madison — prior to the city taking over maintenance of the highway later this summer. INDOT has also pledged to support the city's grant application for federal funding to make more extensive improvements to Main Street in future grant cycles, Courtney said.

NCAA accuses Louisville of recruiting violations

BY GARY B. GRAVES
AP SPORTS WRITER

LOUISVILLE — Louisville has received a notice of allegations from the NCAA that accuses the men's basketball program of committing a Level I violation with an improper recruiting offer and extra benefits and several Level II violations that accuse former Cardinals coach Rick Pitino of failing to promote an atmosphere of compliance.

The notice released on Monday is the completion of a two-year NCAA investigation following a federal corruption probe into college basketball. Louisville acknowledged its involvement in the investigation related to the recruitment of former player Brian Bowen II, which led to the ousters of Pitino and athletic director Tom Jurich in October 2017.

The NCAA's notice says the improper offer and subsequent extra benefits were provided by certain individuals, identified and defined by the NCAA as "representatives of the university's athletics interests."

Louisville address the allegations in a news conference Monday afternoon.

The statement from Louisville notes the school has changed leadership in athletics and basketball, though it does not mention AD Vince Tyra or second-year men's basketball coach Chris Mack. It also outlines several measures of compliance that include reporting to the vice president for risk management, audit and compliance instead of athletics.

"It is important to remember that these are allegations — not facts — and the University will diligently prepare a full and comprehensive response and, absent an unforeseen development, submit it within the prescribed 90-day period. For those allegations that are proven to be factual, the University will take responsibility, as accountability is one of our core Cardinal Principles," the statement said. "However, we will not hesitate to push back where the evidence does not support the NCAA's interpretations or allegations of charges. U of L has a right and a responsibility to stand up for itself when faced with unfair or unfounded charges and will always act in the best interests of the institution. Our legal team has begun the process of reviewing the Notice and will prepare a thorough response on behalf of the University."

Basketball coach Chris Mack also released a statement along the same lines.

"While I understand the allegations brought today, I am confident that the University will do what is right, which includes fighting back on those charges that we simply do not agree with, and for which the facts do not substantiate," Mack said.

with the curve starting to flatten and people eager to get out, she said about 10 people had visited the store as of Monday afternoon around 3 p.m.

Other retail stores, like McWhiggin's Wonder Emporium on Main Street, plan to reopen later this week and have used the period during the shutdown to improve their presence online.

As soon as the virus hit and ownership knew the impact it would have on business, the store built a website and started doing daily Facebook videos which have gotten hundreds of views showing what they have in stock, said Taylor Rinehart, who has co-owned the store with her mother since last September. A lot of other local merchants have used the closure to build websites and expand upon their business models, she noted.

For McWhiggin's, that also meant improving how the store does shipping and offering free delivery to areas as far away as Oldham County, Kentucky, Rinehart said. Thanks to the website and social media, the store has maintained enough orders coming in to sustain nearly-normal revenues, make deliveries and keep the post office busy shipping orders, she said.

"We told customers 'As long as the post office stays open, we stay open,' " Rinehart said.

McWhiggin's plans to reopen its doors Wednesday in a way residents haven't seen for nearly two months: a sidewalk sale and live music from local musician Robby Cox.

Madison Area Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Linsey Bloos echoed Rinehart's statement, saying the pandemic has made a lot of businesses more creative in figuring out ways to sell their products, which usually means advertising more aggressively and being creative online. The Chamber is putting together a spreadsheet of businesses reopening this week and will publish it online, she said Monday.

The Chamber also conducted a survey of businesses last month, which found that most experienced a revenue loss of at least 75% and that 1,845 employees had been laid off or had hours cut due to the virus.

One bright spot, Bloos said, was that most businesses are not currently in danger of closing. About 63% of respondents to the survey said the risk of permanent closure was "not a concern at this time," while those who were concerned about closing in the next three months were predominantly restaurants and retail stores.

"Store have been brilliantly creative during this time," she said.

Madison City Hall partially reopens

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT

Madison City Hall reopened its doors to the public Monday under specific guidelines established by Mayor Bob Courtney to phase in public access to city offices and services.

"City Hall has continued to provide essential services to our community, but we are ready to begin phase one of reopening our city. This will be a very gradual reopening and we will continue to monitor the situation and follow all social distancing guidelines set forth by Governor Holcomb and the CDC. We want to be available for our citizens as the local economy starts to reopen and safety will continue to be our top priority," said Mayor Courtney.

City Hall will be open to the public from 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. Residents are encouraged to continue to utilize the city's drive-through window for payments as often as possible and to call ahead if needing to meet with a specific department to ensure that the department is available. Visitors to City Hall must enter and exit using the front door and are asked not to enter the building if exhibiting any signs of COVID-19 or other contagious health issues such as the flu or a cold.

City Hall will continue to be cleaned daily but restrooms will not be accessible to the public. Counters will be fitted with plastic shields to separate the public from staff members and the number of visitors inside City Hall at any given time will be limited to five. Markers will be placed on the floor to help ensure visitors maintain a six-foot distance from each other and barriers will be in place to prevent mingling in common areas.

All public meetings will continue to be conducted electronically until further notice. The Brown Gym, playgrounds, basketball courts, and all city public restrooms will remain closed. The city campground will tentatively reopen on May 24. Sunrise Golf Course will remain open under current safe-play rules with play by tee times only until 5 p.m.

"We need to work together to bring business back to business. Our community wants to get back to work and our small business owners are awaiting the go ahead to open their doors. Our community needs to continue to support one another during this time and take proper safety measures to ensure we can move towards reopening our economy," said Courtney.

Meatpackers cautiously reopen plants amid virus fears

BY STEPHEN GROVES
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. — A South Dakota pork processing plant took its first steps toward reopening Monday after being shuttered for over two weeks because of a coronavirus outbreak that infected more than 800 employees.

Employees reporting for work in Smithfield Foods' ground pork department filed through a tent where they were screened for fever and other signs of COVID-19. Some said they felt the measures Smithfield has taken would protect them from another virus outbreak, while others were not confident that infections could be halted in a crowded plant.

Lydia Toby said she was "kind of worried" as she entered the plant before 6 a.m. for her first shift in over two weeks. Managers met employees in her department Friday and explained they had installed dividers on the production line and would require everyone to wear masks.

"I think it's going to be OK," Toby said.

In the wake of an executive order from President Donald Trump ordering meat plants to remain open, Arkansas-based Tyson Foods was also resuming "limited production" Monday at its pork plant in Logansport, Indiana, where nearly 900 employees tested positive. And the JBS pork plant in Worthington, Minnesota — just an hour east of Smithfield's South Dakota plant — planned a partial reopening on Wednesday.

Democratic presidential candidate Joe Biden on Monday called meatpacking plants — along with nursing homes — "the most dangerous places there are right now." He called for greater protections for meatpacking workers, as well as a $13-an-hour pay premium.

"They designate them as essential workers and then treat them as disposable," Biden said, on a conference call about protecting essential workers, such as meatpacking workers, that was organized by the League of United Latin American Citizens.

Virginia-based Smithfield is offering COVID-19 testing to all employees and their family members, according to a text message sent to employees. The message told employees to report to a local high school to be tested. Gov. Kristi Noem said employees aren't required to undergo tests before returning to work, though it's strongly encouraged. Noem's health commissioner, Kim Malsam-Rysdon, said it was Smithfield's decision to make the tests optional.

Smithfield didn't respond to requests for comment.

About 250 employees were told to report to work on Monday, according to the union that represents them. The plant employs about 3,700 workers and produces roughly 5% of the nation's pork.

Salaheldin Ahmed, who works in a department that has not yet reopened, said he was called in by plant management to look at changes.

"They fixed a lot of things," he said, describing how workers would be spread apart where possible.

A Centers for Disease Control and Prevention report Friday said more than 4,900 workers at meat and poultry processing facilities have been diagnosed with the coronavirus, including 20 who died. Not all states provided data.

The CDC researchers cited risks including difficulties with physical distancing and hygiene, and crowded living and transportation conditions. They suggested enhanced disinfection and that workers get regular screening for the virus, more space from co-workers and training materials in their native languages. Many meatpacking employees are immigrants; a CDC report on the Smithfield outbreak found that employees there spoke about 40 different languages.

The United Food and Commercial Workers union, which represents most beef and pork workers and about one-third of poultry workers nationwide, has called for stricter measures than the CDC's, including mandating that workers be spaced 6 feet apart on production lines. It has appealed to governors for help enforcing worker safety rules. The union also wants to get rid of waivers that allow some plants to operate at faster speeds.

As plants warily reopen or others operate at diminished capacity with many workers staying home sick or in fear, it's unclear Trump's order will guarantee an unbroken supply of meat.

Tyson Foods reported record meat sales in the first quarter but warned investors Monday that it faces continued production slowdowns. Company officials said it expected lower productivity "in the short term until local infection rates begin to decrease."

Zach Medhaug, a maintenance employee at Tyson's pork plant in Waterloo, Iowa, said he will feel comfortable returning to work when the plant reopens, even as he fears that one of his closest colleagues may soon die from the coronavirus.

Jose Ayala, 44, is in critical condition on a ventilator at the University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics after catching the virus a month ago. Medhaug has been calling Ayala, who is medically paralyzed but may still be able to hear, encouraging him to keep fighting.

Medhaug tested positive himself for the coronavirus on April 20. He said he had mild symptoms and expects to return to work later this week at the plant, which suspended production April 22. Medhaug said Tyson has made key safety changes, such as vowing to enforce rather than just encourage social distancing and providing employees with masks instead of telling them to bring their own.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Indiana's governor has apologized for posing for a photo with two people in which none of the three were wearing protective masks — a photo taken a day after he issued a plan for relaxing coronavirus restrictions that recommends such masks be worn in public until mid-June.

The photo circulating on social media shows Republican Gov. Eric Holcomb taking the selfie while inside a restaurant Saturday in the southern Indiana tourist town of Nashville, even while his statewide stay-a-home order was still in effect.

Holcomb said in a statement that he left his mask in the car while picking up his carry-out order from the restaurant after spending the night at the governor's retreat in nearby Brown County State Park.

"It was a lapse in my usual vigilance," Holcomb said. "I should have gone back out to the car to get my mask. My apologies to all the healthcare professionals and Hoosiers who are working so hard to slow the spread."

Oklahoma's governor faced a backlash in mid-March after tweeting a picture of himself and two of his children at a crowded restaurant the day before he declared a statewide coronavirus emergency.

Holcomb announced on Friday a plan for relaxing coronavirus restrictions, with the goal of allowing nearly all activities to resume on July 4. A new executive order that took effect Monday allows more manufacturers, retailers and shopping malls to reopen in most of the state while directing residents to maintain social distancing of at least six feet and to wear face coverings in public.

Some critics have said they believe Holcomb was easing restrictions too soon and that the photo showed he wasn't leading by example, as Indiana has had more than 1,200 confirmed or probable coronavirus-related deaths.

"It's hypocritical to say we're all in this together, to call on Hoosiers to make sacrifices, and then selfishly ignore your own rules," said Lauren Ganapini, the state Democratic Party's executive director.

For most people, the coronavirus causes mild or moderate symptoms, such as fever and cough that clear up in two to three weeks. For some, especially older adults and people with existing health problems, it can cause more severe illness, including pneumonia

Meanwhile, Indiana health officials added 19 confirmed coronavirus-related fatalities to the state's death toll on Monday. Updated statistics released by the Indiana State Department of Health also added 160 deaths among nursing home residents to the previous statewide total released a week earlier.

Tell us something good

Dear Annie: You asked us to send you positive stories in the midst of the pandemic.

I work at a newspaper in Findlay, Ohio. Over the past four weeks, I have been writing "positive" stories about how people are responding.

I wrote about a man who owns a local coffee shop. He wanted to do something for children who would not be getting a meal at school, so he began providing Lunches of Love for anyone who might need it.

I wrote about a woman who celebrated her 100th birthday. Her family couldn't have a party for her. Instead, they organized a drive-by birthday parade. She was delighted!

There was also a story about a 9-year-old girl who decided to take her at-home art class to the front window of her house, where she painted a "happy Easter" message for all of the neighbors to see, complete with a bunny, cross and Easter egg.

And then there was the story about the man who was furloughed from his job at a distribution center. He and his girlfriend, who are also musicians, decided to livestream concerts on Saturday nights, sending tips to area food banks.

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

There have been so many stories about the good things that I am having trouble keeping up with them all! I just wanted everyone to know that every cloud does have a silver lining. — Reporter From Findlay

Dear Reporter From Findlay: Thank you for these wonderful stories of love and warmth. We may be quarantined, but the human spirit of giving and kindness cannot be detained. Great reporting!

Dear Annie: My story is about the "rainbows" we are seeing because our church members are forced to worship via videoconferences. Our usual 8 a.m. and 10:00 a.m. Sunday services are now combined into one 9 a.m. service held online. Despite the difficulties of worshiping this way, some positives have emerged.

Our 8 o'clockers and 10 o'clockers are connecting in ways that never happened before, as our rector includes chat time both before and after the service.

One 8 a.m. service couple realized how few people they knew from the 10 o'clock service, and they realized they were probably not the only ones. This gave them the idea of creating an updated pictorial directory — a big job, but they offered to oversee it once this pandemic is over. — Silver Linings

Dear Silver Linings: How wonderful that strangers of the same church are now becoming friends. It is an opportunity for them to connect and share with one another outside of worship times as well. Sounds like you have a wise rector, too.

"Ask Me Anything: A Year of Advice From Dear Annie" is out now! Annie Lane's debut book — featuring favorite columns on love, friendship, family and etiquette — is available as a paperback and e-book. Visit http://www.creatorspublishing.com for more information. Send your questions for Annie Lane to dearannie@creators.com.

Making the ordinary extraordinary

Dear Annie: Just adding my opinion about coping in these difficult times. I don't want to be identified, even by the area of the country I live in, because millions in our country are doing the same things to endure and triumph over our present hardships.

My husband has been suffering from cancer for the past four years, and we have come to terms with the expected outcome. I have several serious age-related health issues, so we are like many elderly in our country.

Here's what we do every day:

•We are kind to each other, regardless of the irritating things we both do.

• We find things to laugh about in something we are reading or watching on TV, and we share those things throughout the day.

• We each have a prayer life and spend part of the day in private devotions. We give God thanks over every meal, even if it's just soup.

• We listen to and pray for the concerns of those family and friends. We share laughter with them.

• We limit news encroachment to reading the newspaper in the morning and tuning in to one TV news program that we like to follow.

• We each work on a hobby we like — for fun rather than feeling like we have to.

• We try to get some exercise every day — mainly walking.

• We don't spend time thinking about "what-ifs" or speak them out loud.

• We try to uplift those around us and ourselves in small ways because those small steps contribute to the larger journey, both personally and in community. — Just Ordinary Folks Making It Through Together.

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Ordinary Folks: In doing these daily activities with great love and intention, you are living an extraordinary life of gratitude. Connection to family, kindness, laughter, prayer, having fun and exercising are all wonderful suggestions to make the most of each moment.

Dear Annie: A friend forwarded to me the following poem by author Haroon Rashid:

"We fell asleep in one world, and woke up in another.

"Suddenly Disney is out of magic,

"Paris is no longer romantic,

"New York doesn't stand up anymore,

"The Chinese wall is no longer a fortress, and Mecca is empty.

"Hugs and kisses suddenly become weapons, and not visiting parents and friends becomes an act of love.

"Suddenly you realize that power, beauty and money are worthless, and can't get you the oxygen you're fighting for.

"The world continues its life and it is beautiful. It only puts humans in cages. I think it's sending us a message:

"'You are not necessary. The air, earth, water and sky without you are fine. When you come back, remember that you are my guests. Not my masters'." — Our World

Dear Our World: Mother Earth is a magnificent force that should be treated with love and care. One outcome of the stay-at-home orders during this pandemic is that from China to the United States, and everywhere in between, we have seen better air quality than in more than 60 years. This is a great reminder of how precious is this Earth.

Women's soccer loses equal pay bid

BY ANNE M. PETERSON AND RONALD BLUM
AP SPORTS WRITERS

A federal judge threw out the unequal pay claim by players on the U.S. women's national soccer team in a surprising loss for the defending World Cup champions but allowed their allegation of discriminatory working conditions to go to trial.

Players led by Alex Morgan sued in March 2019, claiming they have not been paid equally under their collective bargaining agreement to what the men's national team receives under its labor deal. They asked for more than $66 million in damages under the Equal Pay Act and Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

In a 32-page decision Friday, U.S. District Judge R. Gary Klausner granted in part a motion for partial summary judgment by the U.S. Soccer Federation. He threw out the Equal Pay Act allegations but left intact the Civil Rights Act claims.

"The history of negotiations between the parties demonstrates that the WNT rejected an offer to be paid under the same pay-to-play structure as the MNT, and the WNT was willing to forgo higher bonuses for benefits, such as greater base compensation and the guarantee of a higher number of contracted players," Klausner wrote.

"Accordingly, plaintiffs cannot now retroactively deem their CBA worse than the MNT CBA by reference to what they would have made had they been paid under the MNT's pay-to-play terms structure when they themselves rejected such a structure," he said.

Klausner left intact claims the USSF discriminated in its use of charter aircraft, and in the money it spent on commercial airfare, hotel accommodations, and medical and training support services.

A trial is scheduled for June 16 in federal court in Los Angeles.

"We are shocked and disappointed with today's decision, but we will not give up our hard work for equal pay," Molly Levinson, spokeswoman for the women's players, said in a statement. "We are confident in our case and steadfast in our commitment to ensuring that girls and women who play this sport will not be valued as lesser just because of their gender."

Players intend to ask the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to overturn Klausner's decision, a move that could delay the trial into 2021 or later.

"If you know this team at all you know we have a lot of fight left in us. We knew this wasn't going to be easy, change never is," defender Becky Sauerbrunn wrote on Twitter.

While the Americans are the most successful women's team, with four World Cup titles including the last two, the U.S. men did not even qualify for the 2018 World Cup. The USSF argued the women actually made more than the men both overall and by game average, and the women claimed they should have the same bonus structure as the men.

"Merely comparing what WNT players received under their own CBA with what they would have received under the MNT CBA discounts the value that the team placed on guaranteed benefits they receive under their agreement, which they opted for at the expense of higher performance-based bonuses," Klausner wrote.

Nutley ranked 90th in nation

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT

Madison High School girls basketball player Jade Nutley has been rated as a 4-Star prospect and the No. 90 player in the Class of 2021 by ESPN.

Nutley, a 6-foot-1 junior post, was given a rating of 94 by the scouting service. She is the No. 3-rated prospect in the state of Indiana, trailing only Ariana Wiggins of Heritage Christian and Meg Newman of Indianapolis North Central. Wiggins, a 5-foot-8 guard who is uncommitted, was ranked 30th nationally while Newman, a 6-foot-3 wing who has committed to Arizona State, is No. 41. Nutley, Wiggins and Newman are the only Indiana players listed in the Top 100.

Brooklynn Miles, a 5-foot-6 point guard from Franklin County (Ky.), was the ranked No. 46 and is the only player listed from Kentucky.

ESPN's Dan Olson had this to say about Nutley during his January scouting update:

"Power post combines physical interior game with soft touch in face up game to the arc; efficient on the block, powers through defenders; passes from high post; defends, alters shots in the paint; a stock-riser in the class of 2021."

Nutley earned the Madison Courier's Player of the Year award this past season after posting a dominating campaign for the Lady Cubs. Nutley averaged 15 points and 11 rebounds per game while leading Madison to a 14-9 record, its first winning season in five years. She was named to the All-Hoosier Hills Conference team and was an Indiana Basketball Coaches Association Underclass selection for a second-straight year.

Nutley has both the career scoring and rebounding records at Madison well within her sights. She will enter her senior season with 966 career points (eighth in school history), which is just 585 points off Brittney Myers' school record. She also has 670 career rebounds, which is 250 behind Olivia Crozier's career record. It's possible that she could end up not only with both records, but with more than 1,000 in each.

Nina Campbell

Madison High School girls basketball junior Jade Nutley has been rated as a 4-star prospect and ranked 90th in the country by ESPN. Nutley, who is uncommitted on her college choice, is the second-ranked player in the state of Indiana.

"She's a great player. She's one of those players that loves to come in and work, not just during practice but before practice and after practice," Madison coach Sonja Bowyer said. "That says what kind of player you are. If you're willing to work outside of the season, not just in the season, that's coachable. She's always thinking about the game."

Nutley received an offer from Indiana Wesleyan last week and has drawn attention from several Division I schools, including Xavier and Evansville.

Azzi Fudd of St. John's College High School in the District of Columbia is the top-ranked player in the class of 2021 according to ESPN. Fudd, who is uncommitted, is one of 21 players to receive ratings of 98.

Secretariat wins virtual Kentucky Derby

BY BETH HARRIS
AP RACING WRITER

Secretariat won a virtual Kentucky Derby against 12 fellow Triple Crown winners, 47 years after the chestnut colt won the real race at Churchill Downs.

The 1 1/4-mile race featuring computer-generated imagery was held Saturday, the same day the 146th Derby had been scheduled until it was postponed by the coronavirus pandemic. The Derby has been re-set for Sept. 5.

Secretariat was the 7-2 favorite, although there was no wagering. Instead, fans selecting the winning horse online were entered to win a VIP experience at the Derby this fall. Churchill Downs pledged to match $1 million in fan donations to COVID-19 relief.

The virtual Derby was part of NBC's three-hour telecast that re-showed portions of the 2015 coverage in which American Pharoah won on his way to becoming racing's first Triple Crown champion in 37 years.

The show opened with Churchill Downs bugler Steve Buttleman playing "Call to the Post" from the front steps of his Louisville home. It moved to the track, with shots of empty stands, betting windows and the jockeys' room.

The track's stable area is set to re-open May 11, with live racing expected to resume May 16.

Dalton comes home to Texas as Prescott's backup

BY SCHUYLER DIXON
AP PRO FOOTBALL WRITER

Andy Dalton is coming home to Texas as Dak Prescott's backup with the Dallas Cowboys.

Dalton and the Cowboys agreed Saturday to a one-year deal that guarantees the former Cincinnati starter $3 million and could be worth up to $7 million. The agreement was first reported by ESPN.

The Cowboys reached a deal with Dalton two days after he was released by the Bengals. That moved cleared the way for No. 1 overall draft pick Joe Burrow, who led LSU to the national championship.

Dalton, born and raised in the Houston area, led TCU to an undefeated season that included a Rose Bowl victory over Wisconsin during the 2010 season before the Bengals drafted him in the second round.

The Cowboys have relied on the untested Cooper Rush behind Prescott the past two seasons. The 32-year-old Dalton marks their biggest investment in a veteran backup since Prescott replaced the injured Tony Romo as a rookie in 2016 and ended up taking his job for good.

Dalton started 133 games for the Bengals and led the franchise's best stretch of playoff appearances — five straight from 2011-15 — but couldn't get that elusive win.

Cincinnati lost in the first round each time, setting an NFL record. Dalton had a broken thumb and was sidelined for the last of those playoff appearances, which ended in a last-minute meltdown and an 18-16 loss to Pittsburgh during the 2015 season.

Dalton's 70-61-2 record as a starter is second best by a Bengals quarterback with at least 10 starts, trailing Virgil Carter. Dalton holds the club records for touchdown passes (204) and completions (2,757).

Coach Zac Taylor signaled the end of Dalton's career in Cincinnati by benching him for three games midway through last year's 2-14 season, a move that shocked Dalton and his longtime teammates. Dalton was upset the Bengals didn't try to trade him before the deadline.

The Cowboys have placed the franchise tag on Prescott, who hasn't signed the one-year tender worth about $31 million. The sides have until July 15 to get a long-term contract done.

Prescott played out his four-year rookie contract, becoming on of the NFL's best bargains as 2016 NFL Offensive Rookie of the Year and a two-time Pro Bowler. The 26-year-old's representatives and the Cowboys have been working on a long-term deal for about a year.

After leading Dallas to the NFC's top seed as a rookie in 2016 and losing his first playoff game to Aaron Rodgers and Green Bay, Prescott broke through with his first postseason victory two years later.

The Cowboys entered last season with high expectations and started 3-0 before fading to 8-8 and missing the playoffs. Dallas didn't renew coach Jason Garrett's contract and hired Mike McCarthy.

Byron scores 3rd iRacing victory

BY JENNA FRYER
AP AUTO RACING WRITER

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — William Byron showed he's the sharpest gamer in NASCAR's iRacing Series with his third victory in four events.

Byron passed Timmy Hill with seven laps remaining at virtual Dover International Speedway, where NASCAR was scheduled to actually race Sunday, to win yet again on the iRacing platform. The Hendrick Motorsports driver has consistently been the best of the NASCAR professionals in simulated racing.

Alex Bowman won last week at virtual Talladega Superspeedway, so Hendrick drivers have now won four consecutive iRacing events.

"I've enjoyed this iRacing Series, but I'm definitely ready to get going in my real car," Byron said. "Racing anything, whether it's a box car or anything with an engine, is going to give you confidence if you are winning."

He said that in all his years using iRacing, he's never been in such competitive events since NASCAR launched the invitational esports series after the stock car series was suspended March 13.
